Background: In each of the sessions of the Soma work a Personal Log is filled out by the client after the session is received. This Log reviews their progress during the interim time between sessions and allows the client to claim their experience, communicate the effects of the work and the felt changes.

Design: A Personal Log sheet attached to the Client Notebook. This Log has been used for nineteen (19) years with each client and was not designed specifically for this study. A copy of the Log for each session is included with the research for ease of understanding. The most consistent statements on the Log were used. If less than 5 similar comments were made or there were no comments, we stated "Blank". In the Client Research box the question number correlates to the Personal Log question. The statements are followed by a number that is the actual count of that word being used in total of all the Log counts.

Methods: The Personal Log is used only to Session #8 in private practice; however, in the training with the models we use the Log for ten sessions. There is no Log for the final Session #10. This study is from the model pool and therefore we will address the key words of the client through the Arm Session. These sessions were done by students in the Soma Training. This study was done with seventy four (74) clients. The Log for Session Eight, Nine, and Arms consist of forty eight (48) clients.

Stated Goals: We are asking the questions; "What are the consistencies in the feelings the client notices in the sessions"? We are looking for similarities in responses from clients receiving the same session. Which sessions elicit specific responses? Are there questions on the Personal Log that are not relevant?

Observations of Common Responses:

Session #1

- statements of desire to be more active, but not carrying through the action.

Session #2

- stated increase of activity.

Session #3

- spoke of "calm, even, fine", but noticed more fatigue and confusion.
- statements of desire to be more active, but not carrying through the action.
- stated they were becoming more self aware.

Session #4

- included dialogue of feeling emotionally awkward in self
- hungry and exhausted.
- they did not feel energized during interim between sessions.
- clients stated they were becoming more self aware.

Session #5

- the comments were related to poor sleep, and feeling uncomfortable in the body
- clients stated they were becoming more self aware.

Session #6

- they did not feel energized during interim between sessions.

Session #7

- the session with the highest percentage of mood or emotional changes after receiving.

Sessions #8, #9, Arms

- The most interesting observation of the integrative sessions, was that the communication about both feelings and body sensations dropped off significantly. There were either one word answers or blanks in all the integrative sessions Logs. [We think this may have to do with the notion that when there is pain the attention is drawn to that place. When there is organization and integration the mind is calmed, and there is less internal confusion and dialog, therefore, less communication.]

Arm session

- increased comments that their movement was toward reaching out
- awareness and they were more expressive about unity with others.

On Personal Log: Question #5 & #6

- Either stated Blank or there were varied task related statements or statements of daily activities. These were so diverse they cannot be documented by comparison. Examples: "Issues? Just living life", "Daily putting one foot in front of the other", "Making preparation for travel.", "Getting ready to open business". [Even though these questions were difficult to research, they remain valid as questions for personal journaling and dialogue that related to their individual experience.]

In Soma Neuromuscular Integration we hold a value in assisting the client with making meaning out of the rituals, symbols and body sensations that articulate their lives. One of the tools we use for this assistance is what we call a Personal Log. This Log is included in the Client Notebook that each client going through the Soma sessions receives. This Log is then completed and brought to the next session and before the session the Soma Practitioner goes over the Log with the client. This interaction using the Log is an opportunity for personalized exchange, questions and further illumination of what that client experienced with that session. This allows the Soma Practitioner to chart the progress or regress of the client, and to read and hear the recording of that progress/regress in their own words; to listen and witness.

We feel this act of stating what is so by the client, develops awareness of feeling and self reliance. We also assert, that for the Soma Practitioner to witness , contain and hear the client's responses becomes a significant component in the client's total integration of the work. We believe that the development of self reliance sets the groundwork for reaching out and sharing with other, so the changes can be productive and creative for the client in their daily life.
